LOTTERY

Of B O O K S ; which Opened on the Second Day of June last, to the General satisfaction of all that took Cognizance thereof, Especially the Adventurers.

T HE Author therefore, that he may the better please his former Adventurers, many of them being earnest once more to try their Fortunes, and also several others that wanting notice Laps'd their time, and now stand ready with the formost to put in their mony, resolves to make a clear Warehouse by a General dispatch of those few Remainders, which to continue the work, He (when they were Delatory) Drew for himself. And also those Supernumeraries Printed, to satisfie the several Claims of the Many that might draw only Blanks, bringing all down in the same manner to the like low Markets and Under-rated Vendition, expecting thereby to set at Rights his vast charge of re-Printing; extraordinary cost in expedition, and former deplorable Loss by the Fire: so making himself a small pittance from a competent Gain: the Proposals are the same with the former, only this Additional encouragement, That whereas the Adventurers were so kind as to part with their money, and stay for their Prizes, till Printed and prepared, Reposing so much trust and confidence in the Authors Integrity; Now shall, at one and the same instant, know their Chance, and Receive their Books.

The PROPOSITIONS.

F Irst, Whosoever will be pleased to put in Five shillings shall draw a Lot, his Fortune to Receive the greatest or meanest Prize.

Secondly, Whoever will Adventure deeper putting in Twenty five shillings shall be presented by the Author.

Thirdly, Who thinks fit to put in for Eight Lots Forty shillings shall Receive Nine, and the advantage of their free choice, if all Blanks, of any of the Works next hereafter named, viz. Virgill, Æsop Compleat, or the History of China ; and because the Homers Iliads and Odysses are wanting in the Choices, Whosoever putting in Forty shillings, Draws but one of the Works of Homer, or but one Volume of Æsop and Eight Blanks, to make perfect, shall be presented with the other.

The value of the Books as above, being sufficiently known to be the Prizes they have been usually sold at, Amounts to 4111 l. but the Lots, with their proportion of Blanks, Amounts but to 1255 l. so that the Author receives for his Books little more than one Fourth of the value, which with the possibility of the Great Lots, or the probability of Seven Prizes in Nine Lots, as were drawn in the last, and the Certainty of Receiving in Books much more than their money, is Encouragement enough to the Adventurer. But this is sufficiently understood by many.

Those that please to put in part of their money, Enter their Names and so be Drawn in Course, may be pleased to come or send to the Author's Office at the Black-boy, over against St. Dunstans Church in Fleet=street. The time will be Certain, within Two Months from the Date.

Sixth of January, 1668.
